DEBATE

On the bill from the Senate for making appropriation for building an additional number of gun boats for the protection of our ports and harbors.

The principal argument, although this does not seem to be openly avowed, in favor of the present measure, is the supposed predilection of the executive, for this system of defence. Indeed this is but a new edition, or rather a new volume, of the celebrated proclamation and gun boat system, which instead of elevating us in the scale of nations, has greatly sunk the national character. The objects in view are to protect the commerce of the union to a certain extent, and to protect our coasts and sea ports, of course this measure is to constitute a material if not the principal part of a general system of national defence and protection. The object is proper and patriotic, and it is a subject of deep regret that the means are inefficient. But history and human experience have settled the true character of these machines, and as we have nothing else to hope for we can expect nothing like an energetic and effectual system.

Commerce is undoubtedly entitled to protection from considerations as important as they are obvious.

In itself it is friendly to civilization and rational freedom.

There is a more intimate and widely extended connection between agriculture the "art of all arts," and commerce in the U. S. than the world has ever witnessed in other ages and nations.

The protection of commerce was one great object which the people had in view in the formation of the present constitution and by that instrument taking into view the peculiar circumstances which attended its formation and introduction, the agricultural portion of the community is pledged to the commercial to support such measures as may give effect to that great object of the union.

The organization of an efficient general system of national defence is of great importance in various points of view.

It will tend to the creation and establishment of a correct and commanding national character.

It will command the respect and confidence of foreign nations, and thus prevent foreign machinations against our internal peace, and preserve the relations of amity with all nations.

It will be auspicious to the preservation of the union, and the true republican principles of the present constitution.

It is natural to pass from the consideration of the character of the present crisis, and the circumstances which imperiously demand a system of efficiency and energy at the present period, to that sacred bond of our union, in which are pointed out the duties of the government; the constitution of the U. S. In the third section of the second article we read, "the president shall, from time to time, give to the congress information of the state of the union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient." The president shall recommend. The voice of the constitution is imperative. It makes it the duty of the chief executive magistrate to take upon himself the responsibility of explicitly recommending to the legislature such measures as he deems the public welfare to require. In making the inquiry, in what manner has this great and solemn duty been performed at the present moment? The transition is easy to the message of the president at the commencement of this session. These messages, as public documents, and addressed exclusively to the legislature, are certainly fair subjects of criticism; and whoever shall be impelled by duty to speak unpleasantly of the present system of administration, will have an abundant source of rich consolation in the reflection, that, when gun boats are the subject of discussion, it is impossible to be out of order. The present system begins and ends with gun boats. In the message to which allusion has been made, which should have been as a polar star to guide us at this dark season, not a single measure is explicitly and unequivocally recommended. I will read that part which relates to the naval establishment. "The gun boats already provided have been chiefly assigned to New York, New Orleans and the Chesapeake. Whether our moveable force on the water, or materials and other defensive works on the land, should be augmented in this or any other form, is left to the wisdom of the legislature. For the purpose of manning these vessels, in sudden attacks on our harbors, it is a matter for consideration whether the seamen of the United States may not justly be formed into a special militia, to be called on for tours of duty, in defence of the harbors where they shall happen to be; the ordinary militia of the place furnishing that portion which may consist of landsmen"——Here the executive submits certain matters for consideration, without assuming to himself the responsibility of expressly recommending them. In relation to the naval establishment, he only talks of a moveable force on the water; and if we should build our flotilla of two hundred and fifty-seven gun boats, at an expence which will be shewn to be enormous, and, in the event of a war with Great Britain, two or three British ships of the line, and as many frigates should come upon our coast, and blow them all to atoms, as would infallibly be the case if they were to come in contact with them, we shall no doubt be told that a wise and prudent executive never recommended such an ill judged, degrading and disastrous measure. But for what purpose are gun boats to be built? To protect commerce and the coast. Every one knows that we cannot protect our commerce in every clime, and on every sea, against the naval power of Great Britain. It would be unwise, therefore, at present, to exhaust our resources by building a navy of ships of the line. It does not follow, however, that nothing can be done; that we cannot support our own jurisdiction. Nothing effectual, it is certain, can be done by gun boats. They have never been of use but as auxiliaries to more extensive & substantial establishments; and they have always been of so little comparative use, as to render it impossible to ascertain the amount of the service they have rendered. We may safely challenge their advocates to produce a single instance in which, alone and unconnected with works of more consequence, they have been of any essential use at all, for purposes either of offence or defence. In my researches into their history I have met with no instance of the kind.

Here I shall advert to a document, the reading of which has been called for by the honorable chairman of the committee on that part of the president's message relative to aggressions committed within our waters, and with which I should not otherwise have troubled the house. I do it at this time, because I find my voice failing so fast that I shall be unable to go so fully into the subject as I originally contemplated. This I shall not regret myself, and still less will the house regret it. In the message of Feb. 10, 1807, communicating the information requested by the house of representatives, relating to the utility and efficacy of gun-boats, we find, indeed, that gun-boats constitute a subordinate species of defence, and yet they are spoken of as competent to almost all the purposes of national protection. A flotilla of no less than two hundred is contemplated.

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE U. S.

I communicate to congress the inclosed letters from governor Hull respecting the Indians in the vicinity of Detroit residing within our lines. They contain information of the state of things in that quarter which will properly enter into their view in estimating the means to be provided for the defence of our country generally.

TH: JEFFERSON.

Dec. 3e, 1807.

DETROIT, Nov. 1807.

SIR,

In consequence of your letter of the 27th September last, containing the instructions of the president, to be communicated to the Indians, I have called together a number of the chiefs of different nations, and delivered to them the following speech:

My Children,

I have received a speech from your Great Father, of the seventeen fires, with directions to communicate it to you. I do it with pleasure, because the advice in it is further evidence of his paternal care. It is designed for your own good, and the good of your women and children—listen to it with attention, and seriously consider its contents

Your father, the president of the U. S. desires to recall to your minds the paternal policy pursued towards you by the U. S. and still meant to be pursued; that the U. S. never wished to do you an injury, but on the contrary to give you all the assistance in their power towards improving your condition and enabling you to support yourselves and your families. He observes that a misunderstanding having arisen between the United States and the English, war may possibly ensue;—that in this war it is his wish the Indians should be quiet spectators, not wasting their blood in quarrels which do not concern them; that we are strong enough to fight our own battles, and therefore ask no help; and if the English should ask theirs, it should convince them that it proceeded from a sense of their weakness which would not augur success in the end; that at the same time as we have learnt that some tribes are already expressing intentions hostile to the United States; we think it proper to apprise them of the ground on which they now stand, and that on which they will stand; for which purpose we make to them this solemn declaration of our unalterable determination; that we wish them to live in peace with all nations as well as with us, and we have no intention ever to strike them or to do them any injury of any sort unless first attacked or threatened; but that learning that some of them meditate war on us, we too are preparing for war against those, and those only who shall seek it: And that if ever we are constrained to lift the hatchet against any tribe, we will never lay it down till that tribe is exterminated, or driven beyond the Mississippi. He adjures them, therefore, if they wish to remain on the land which covers the bones of their fathers, to keep the peace with a people who ask their friendship without needing it; in war they will kill some of us; we shall destroy all of them. Let them then continue quiet at home, take care of their women and children, and remove from among them the agents of any nation persuading them to war, and let them declare to us explicitly and categorically that they will do this; in which case they will have nothing to fear from the preparations we are now unwillingly making to secure our own safety.

MY CHILDREN,

Thus you see the interest your Great Father takes in your welfare: how anxious he is to promote your happiness; how desirous he is to prevent you from taking any measures whibh will involve you in ruin; how generous in advising you to remain quiet spectators of any differences that may take place between the white people; how candid in warning you of the fate of any tribe who shall have the hardihood to raise the hatchet against us.

My Children,

If you are faithful to yourselves, if you desire to promote your own happiness and that of your women and children, if you expect a continuance of protection, and those friendly offices which you are constantly receiving; if indeed, as your Great Father expresses it, you expect to continue in the land which covers the bones of your fathers, you will listen to his paternal council and call the Great Spirit to witness your solemn determination to follow his advice.

My Children,

I expect from you a plain, decided answer, which I shall immediately transmit to the Great Council Fire of the nation.

To which NANUAME a chief of the Pottawatamie nation made the following reply.

FATHER,

"We have listened to what you said to us yesterday. We have had a council by ourselves, and I now speak the opinion of all my brethren present; and I believe I express the wishes of the whole Pottawatamie nation.

"Father. We thank the great Spirit that our father of the seventeen fires does not wish to involve us in the quarrels of the white people. We hope they will have none. If they have any they had better settle them by themselves.

"Father. We wish the British would give us the same advice as we receive from our great father the president of the U. S. We believe he is strong because he does not want any aid from us. We believe the British are weak because they want us to assist them.

"Father. We remember former times how they deceived us. When we pass the banks of the Miami, we see the ruins of the old British fort. It reminds us of our fathers who fell on those fatal plains. It reminds us how they were driven to combat against the Americans and the fatal consequences which followed. It reminds us of the ingratitude of the British; how they shut their gates against us when we were flying to them for protection.

"Father. We never will again place any dependance on them. They have deceived us once and we will not confide in them again.

"Father, Why should we fight their battles? If they should be successful we shall gain nothing by the contest, if they should be unfortunate it will end in our destruction.

"Father. We live in your country—We are under your protection. You feed us when we are hungry, you clothe us when we are naked, we receive every year money and valuable goods from our great father the president. Although we have not the advantage of learning as you white people have, we have too much understanding to forfeit all these advantages. We [illegible] too much justice and gratitude to our friends and benefactors.

"Father, It is true we were [illegible] Malden; we have been there some [illegible] we have been promised valuable [illegible] we have received little besides [illegible]

"Father, We have left them; [illegible] not return to them: we will take [illegible] vice of our great Father of the [illegible] Fires, and remain quiet spectators [illegible] quarrels, if you should have any; [illegible] the determination of all the chiefs [illegible] present.

"Father, When you first sent [illegible] we immediately prepared to come [illegible] you. Captain M'Kee prevented us [illegible] coming then; he renewed his promises to us, and gave us a keg of [illegible]; that fatal keg then stopped us. [illegible] were stopped a second and a third [illegible] At last without his knowledge we [illegible] the river; we are now happy on [illegible] shore and safe under your protection.

"Father, Inform our great Father [illegible] take him by the hand; we will hold him [illegible] and always listen to and follow his [illegible] sel. May the Great Spirit ever protect him and the people of the U. S."

The Porqueboad, chief of the Chippewa nation, spoke as follows:

"Father, Your red children present [illegible] attention.

"Father, Your red children, who [illegible] take their good and great Father, the president of the U. S by hand, and to [illegible] advice make the following reply:

"Our Great Father, the president of the U. S.—Bad birds hover about us, but our ears are shut to their advice; our ears are open to nothing but the counsel of our Great Father.

Father, You cannot, you must not suppose our intentions bad, or that we are hostile to our brethren, the whites of the U. S.; for do you not see us here, surrounded by our women and children counselling with you.

"Father, We are informed that it is possible a rupture may take place between the English and Americans; if that event should happen we are determined not to take a part on either side but remain quietly in our villages, taking care of our women and children, and cultivating our corn fields.

"Father, Your children wish to enjoy a continuance of the blessings of peace with you, our hopes are in you, our dependence is on you; our only wish is to remain forever with you.

"Father, Many of our people are ignorant, many of them are wicked; we cannot answer for their conduct. If some of them should raise the tomahawk they must answer for the consequences.

"Father, Our solemn determination is never to raise the hatchet against the U. S. We too well know the fatal consequences of it; for if we are hungry our father feeds us; if we are dry, our father gives us to drink; if we are naked, our father clothes us; all which benefits we should forfeit by so doing.

"Father, If the war pipe is offered us to smoke, we will reject it; we will send from among us all persons who give us bad counsel.

"Father, one of our war chiefs is going on a visit to our Great Father, the president of the U. S; we hope he will be received and treated as his son, and we pray the Great Spirit to return him to us in health

"Father, Bad birds fly among the whites, as well as the red people; we hope you will not listen to them, but trust to the honor of your children. May the Great Spirit watch over us all."

The chiefs of the Ottawa nation and of the Wyandot nation, have made similar determinations, and I have great confidence in their sincerity

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

(Signed) WILLIAM HULL.

The hon Henry Dearborn,
Secretary of War.

Detroit, 24th November 1807.

To Henry Dearborn, Esq
Secretary of War.

SIR,

I NOW have the pleasure to inform you that a number of principal chiefs have returned from Malden and are now here. I have examined them separately and they give this account in which they all agree. That Aubayway called there on his way home from here; that great attention was paid to him by M'Kee and the British officers; that four days ago they were called to a council; that they were informed that a war would soon take place between them and the Americans, and that they (the Indians) must take up the hatchet in their favor against the Americans; that before they gave an answer the [illegible] themselves, and appoin[illegible] make their answer, wh[illegible]

That they had lived [illegible] tion of the U. S. that [illegible] with justice and kindnes[illegible] ther the president—th[illegible] made a treaty in which [illegible] themselves under the p[illegible] S. and no other power—[illegible] ceived and were entitl[illegible] sents from the U. S. th[illegible] the president did not a[illegible] themselves in the qu[illegible] people, but to remain q[illegible] they were all determi[illegible] vice; that it was an evi[illegible] enough to fight his own[illegible] this council many of [illegible] although they were all [illegible]

I have every reason [illegible] tru[illegible] as many as sever[illegible] have called here will [illegible] on their way to their v[illegible] kindly and give them [illegible] eat. I hope in a few d[illegible] their villages and hunti[illegible] issues of provisions wi[illegible] find the issues of provis[illegible] and this very large, on[illegible] ty, paying them their [illegible] ney, and vast numbers [illegible] from Malden. It is [illegible] compared to what has b[illegible] British; that you say is [illegible] think however we ha[illegible] than fight them. The[illegible] has a very happy effect they gave an answer they held a council by themselves, and appointed Aubayway to make their answer, which was as follows.

That they had lived under the protection of the U. S. that they were treated with justice and kindness by their great father the president—that they had lately made a treaty in which they acknowledge themselves under the protection of the U. S. and no other power—that they had received and were entitled to valuable presents from the U. S. that their great father the president did not ask them to involve themselves in the quarrels of the white people, but to remain quiet spectators; that they were all determined to take his advice; that it was an evidence he was strong enough to fight his own battles; that after this council many of them left Malden, although they were all urged to remain.

I have every reason to believe this to be true; as many as seven or eight hundred have called here within two or three days on their way to their villages. I treat them kindly and give them what they want to eat. I hope in a few days they will go to their villages and hunting grounds and the issues of provisions will cease. You will find the issues of provisions the last month and this very large, on account of the treaty, paying them their Fort [illegible]ustry money, and vast numbers of them returning from Malden. It is however nothing compared to what has been issued by the British; that you say is no rule for us. I think however we had better feed them, than fight them. The president's advice has a very happy effect on them.

I am very respectfully,
Your most ob't humble serv't,
(Signed) WM. HULL.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 7.

The President of the United States has ordered a court of enquiry to sit on gen. Wilkinson. The court, we hear, consist of col. Burbeck, of the artillery, col. Cushing, of the infantry, and col. Williams, of the engineers.

The SENATE have assigned this day for considering the report in the case of John Smith.

WASHINGTON, January 5.

The house were this day wholly engaged in the discussion of the resolution offered by Mr. Randolph on Thursday last, in relation to gen. Wilkinson.

The question at the last consideration was on its reference. It had been then moved to refer it to a select committee, with power to send for persons, papers, &c. and a motion made to amend this motion by striking out the words in Italic was then under consideration and of course was first taken into consideration this day.

The motion for striking out these words was supported by Messrs. Lyon, Campbell, Milnor, Holland, Sloan, Dana, Fisk and Alston, and opposed by Messrs. Stanford, Gardenier, and Elliot; and was carried by yeas and nays, 72 to 38.

The question was then taken on the reference of the resolution, and negatived, only one or two rising in favor of it.

The question then recurring on the original resolution, Messrs. Burwell, Troup and Quincy supported, and Messrs. Blackledge, Milnor, Campbell, and Gardenier opposed it; when

Mr. Bibb said it was now a late hour (half past four) and several gentlemen who would wish to express their opinions had not yet had an opportunity; he therefore moved to adjourn. Carried, 60 to 43.

The Orion, arrived at New-York, was detained at Falmouth from the 18th of September to the 11th of November, and was paid by the captors, the costs of court, a new cable damage upon the sales and hawsers, and nine guineas per day, during the detention.

Extract of a letter dated Norfolk Jan. 1.

Mr. Rose the English minister arrived in the Statira on the 26th ult, still continues in Hampton roads. It is said and generally believed that there arrived in Lynhaven bay 7 frigates or ships of the line yesterday, probably to give weight to his negociations. There seems to be more then a "speck of war in the Horizon.

The British ship L'Africain, of 20 guns, was captured by two French privateers, after an action of two hours, on her passage from London to Port au Prince, with a cargo invoiced at £40,000; and carried into St. Jago de Cuba.

A gentleman of distinguished talents in this city, declared several years ago, speaking of Bonaparte, that he would wash one foot in the Mediterranean, and the other in the Baltic—and being sometime afterwards reminded of the completion of his remark, added, that we should be fortunate, if he did not bend over, and wash his hands in the lakes of North America.

The following interesting extract of a letter was received by a gentleman in Norfolk from his correspondent in Lisbon, dated 31st Oct.

"Yesterday a courier arrived from France, bringing the disagreeable intelligence, that our ambassador had left Paris the middle of this month. The count de Ega, our ambassador to Spain, has also left Madrid. Twenty-five thousand men are on their march against this country, the advance guard of which was expected to arrive at Burgos yesterday. On the 10th of November the Spanish and French armies are to march from Salamanca, the place of rendezvous. General Junot, late minister to Portugal, is appointed general in chief; Laborde and Clement, jun. are generals of division. The requisition of soldiers and seamen is exercised with the utmost strictness and energy. The provinces are without troops, most of which are drawn towards the capital. The lieutenant generals Gomes, Freire, marquis d'Alorna and Francis de Gunba, are appointed the generals to command the troops of Portugal. Anthony de Araujo Azevedo, minister for foreign affairs, left this place yesterday for Madrid, to negociate with general Junot.

The packet from Falmouth arrived this day and left the mail, as they must hereafter do, without the bar. Twelve sail of the line and five frigates, British, are off the bar at this moment, with what intention is not known, perhaps Lisbon is to share the fate of Copenhagen."

Communications from Washington to the Editor of the U. S. Gazette.

Tuesday, Dec. 29.

How long will the embargo continue?

Twelve months say some of its advocates, six months according to others;—but all agree that it cannot be discontinued till our differences with England are amicably settled. Such was the language yesterday held in debate by Mr. Crowninshield who is generally considered as a pretty correct organ of the executive will.

It seems that a motion was made in secret session to limit the operation of the embargo but it was overruled. Unless a general opposition should be immediately manifested to the measure throughout the union, there is little reason to expect an early repeal. It is believed that a majority of congress were in their hearts opposed to the measure, and when the house on Saturday evening adjourned over to Monday some hopes were indulged that a sufficient number would be persuaded to give an independent vote. Several member however, who finally voted for the bill were free in expressing their reluctance. A motion was made by Gen Chandler of the province of Maine, that they should meet on Sunday, but the house appearing to be decidedly against it, and the yeas and nays being demanded the motion was withdrawn.

Upon whom will the embargo fall with the severest pressure? It is not very important to ascertain who will suffer most, since it is agreed that all must suffer much An idea is however entertained by some southern gentlemen, that they will feel the effects of the measure most severely. Their crop of tobacco is this year unusually abundant, and is now chiefly in the hands the planter. Their rice and cotton, also, have not yet been brought to market. Besides this the planters are not generally in the habit of laying up much for future contingencies; but live in a style equal to to their incomes; so that they are dependent on bringing the produce of a year to a good market. I know not how far the ideas are correct, but they are advanced by some southern gentlemen, and yet the members from the south except a part of the Georgia delegation, generally voted for the bill, while the strength of the opposition was chiefly confined to the north. As many of the harbors in the northern states are frozen in winter, it is probable that a considerable proportion of their shipping is already at sea.

INTENDING to remove to the state of Tennessee as soon as possible, I wish to dispose of the following valuable and increasing property upon lew terms, which property I inherited from my ancestors, who have held a legal title to the same for upwards of one hundred years.

One tract well known by the name of ABINGDON, being on the Potomac river between Alexandria and George Town, and nearly opposite the city of Washington, beautifully situated, containing about Four Hundred acres, now leased to the Mr. Wises for three hundred and sixty dollars per annum with other stipulations contained in the said lease.

One other tract contiguous to the first, leased to William Fraser for forty dollars per annum, containing about sixty acres.

One other tract containing ten acres of bottom land, adjoining th Four Mile tract.

One other tract contiguous to the Abingdon estate, and within two and a half miles of George-Town, containing 725 acres. The greatest part of this land is heavily covered with red and white Oak.

ALSO,
Three thousand acres on the Scioto River, in the state of Ohio.

This tract descended to me from my uncle George D. Alexander, being one moiety of the land he was entitled to for his military services during the revolutionary war. All the title papers with the wills under which I am entitled to the above property, are in the hands of BALDWIN DADE, Esq. to whom application will please to be made for terms he being legally authorised to contract to dispose of all the above valuable property, which good and satisfactory titles will be given.

EMBRACING all their late discoveries, and that part of the continent heretofore the least known. This map will be compiled from the best maps now extant, as well published as manuscript, from the collective information of the best informed travellers through the various portions of that region, and corrected by a series of several hundred celestial observations, made by Captain Lewis during his late tour.

FOR the convenience of subscribers, the several works will be delivered at the most respectable commercial towns, and at the seats of government of the respective states and territories within the Union: no advance required, nor will payment be demanded until such delivery is made.

THE price of part the first, in sheets, will be ten dollars, and that of part the second, in one volume, eleven dollars, delivered in boards. Price of the Map, ten dollars.

 ANY persons who may have subscribed for these works, to lists which contained the stipulated prices for the same, and who may be dissatisfied with the terms now proposed, are at liberty to withdraw their names from such lists, at any time prior to the 1st day of December next. M. LEWIS.
